Fayetteville, North Carolina

Foreword

IT WAS JUST one hundred and fifty years ago that a Convention met here to ratify the Constitution of the United States. They had tried before and failed, but finally after many heated arguments, the resolution was passed. This year the State will celebrate this event at a Sesquicentennial Celebration here in Fayetteville. Because of this celebration, because this event was such a momentous occasion in Fayetteville, and because it has meant so much in the history of our great State, we have selected it for the theme of our 1939 LAFAMAC.

Social Customs of 1789

IF A YOUNG man wished to court a young lady he had first to obtain permission from the head of the family. It was within the bounds of propriety for a young man to take his sweetheart for a ride or to accompany her on a walk. They might be seen together at church or the races, although it was customary for a young lady to accompany the family to a ball rather than to be escorted by her lover. The methods for winning the approval of the opposite sex were the same then as at present. Coquetry and dress were the woman's stock in trade, but she also added other accomplishments of singing and playing musical instruments. The "flapper" was formerly known as a "belle," and "beau" was the ante-bellum term for what is known today as a "smoothie."

Subscription balls were very popular. Usually several managers were appointed for the season and would make all arrangements, such as fixing the dates of the balls, obtaining a ballroom, and providing the music and refreshments. They fixed the subscription price, usually at five dollars, and determined the eligibility of an applicant. These managers also assigned dance partners, conducted the introduction of strangers, and extended invitations to visitors. Dancing was indeed the favorite form of amusement at any social gathering. The private balls were usually very formal. The ballrooms were spacious and handsomely furnished. A range of sofas was placed around the room, and from the centre of the ceiling a large chandelier was suspended from which a flood of candlelight was thrown over the company.

Dancing masters often traveled about teaching the newest steps. The minuet and Parsby's Regadoon were very popular, but the cotillion was the most favored.

Debating clubs and literary societies were also popular during this period as well as musical and theatrical societies. The Thalian Association was one of the chief centers of social life in North Carolina during the Colonial period.

MOTTO: Truth Conquers All Things

TO THE SENIORS!

Four happy years have passed swiftly by,
And we are sad as we say, "Good-bye"
To our teachers, who were so patient and kind,
Giving their best to train our minds.
We try in futile words to express our thanks sincere;
Always we'll hold their memory dear.

So with success crowning our early aim,
We have what we hoped to gain.
Life's mighty threshold now beckons us to new fields
Where our minds and hands we pledge to worthy yields,
Trusting the influence which led us through past hopes and fears
To guide us through long and happy future years.

—By Fred Owen, Class Poet

June, 1939
At home

DEAREST NAN,

Thank you so much for the lovely graduation present. I still can hardly believe that high school days are over. Can you?

Do you remember our first day at high school? We were so scared! And then, remember our first class meeting, when we elected officers. If you remember, George Burriss was president, Frank Burton, vice-president, and Patsy Miller was secretary and treasurer. And then we selected for our class colors blue and gold, for our flower the sweet pea, and for our motto "Truth Conquers All Things." At Commencement, that year, when Patsy Miller won the Scholarship prize, we were so proud of her!

After that, you left. We missed you so much.

In September, '36, we began our second year of high school. A few members of the class were missing; there were a few new ones. For this year Frank Burton was president, Rupert Jernigan, vice-president, Mary Kennedy, secretary. and Anne McInnis, treasurer. Nothing of special importance happened to us that year.

In the fall of 1937, we came back again as juniors. George Burriss and Frank Burton again were president and vice-president. Agnes Howard was secretary and Sam Wright was treasurer. In the spring of '38 we gave a Spanish Junior-Senior (I wrote about that). Robert Lee was chief marshall that year. Elise Rouse was the junior debater and Anne Burkehead won the Junior Stedman Essay prize.

Then at last we became seniors. We could sit on the front seats in chapel, be the first to leave, and use the senior steps.

Our officers for this all-important year were: Sam Wright, president; Mary Kennedy, vice-president; Eddie Joyner, secretary; and Mary E. Johnson, treasurer. We finally picked these superlatives: Prettiest Girl—Elise Rouse; Most Courteous Girl and Boy—Cantey DeVane and Jack Stubbs; Best All-Round Girl and Boy—Gladys Sessoms and Harold Townsend; Most Dependable Girl and Boy—Agnes Howard and Rupert Jernigan; Most Popular Girl and Boy—Mary Huske and Eddie Joyner.

Don't you think that we've had four very nice years of high school? I do. Write and tell me how you've been getting along.

Love,
Polly.

Miss Gladys Sessoms

Heaven,
April 26, 1955

Dear Gladys,

Upon hearing that you were so ill, I decided to write you. That was a year ago. I was disappointed not to find you here, so I take it for granted you're still "hanging on."

Well, things have happened quickly. After I left you at the hospital, I saw Billy McLeod with Elise ("Gay Divorcee") Rouse, and the dire shock of seeing him with a specimen of the female sex was too much. I fainted. When I awoke, I was surrounded by nurses. Eleanor Acker, Marcelle Bullard, Mary Frances Hall, Olga Kanos, Doris Ragan, and Mildred Watson were all looking at me and trying, I guess, to figure out whether or not I was real. In a small while three more nurses, Margaret Tripp, Marilyn Miller, and Jessie Warren came in, followed by, of all people, Doctor Dick Hurdis and Doctor Sam Wright with his inseparable assistants, Carter Twine and David Trice. With apologies for the on-lookers, Sam asked if I were ready for him to operate. That was too much! I died.

After Doctor James Pittman helped them pronounce me truly dead, I was sent to the Lee Tatum-La Marr Williams funeral home. Here Katherine Sanson, Grace Quicke, and Ruby Hubbard, beauticians, tried to fix my hair so that I'd at least be buried a good-looking woman.

From the funeral home I was flown to my cemetery in a plane piloted by John McGugan and Jack Lunday. The looks of things almost made me wish I were alive again.

Then the funeral. Do funerals make you nervous, Gladys? Your being so sick. . . Harold Townsend and Charles Broadfoot conducted my funeral. There were so many prominent people present. Doctor Charles King was there. Doctor Watson Lawhon was among the rest, and he certainly looked sad. They say he still can't make up his mind whether to return to kindergarten or not. (Lea Brown is the principal—or principle—have it your way.) The famed business man, James Norris, was surrounded by his secretaries and stenographers, Mayme Ward, Hester Underwood, little Mary Kennedy (who is actually beginning to grow —two inches), Helen Mann, Catherine Melvin, and Mary Louise McNeill. Thurman Bishop, James Raeford, and Howard Brown, the wealthy automobile factory owners, were sad onlookers. I think they really came to hear Fred Owen make his speech—which was very touching. Robert Bagley and Inez Dew wrote up my funeral for the "Happy Herald," Mary Huske's society newspaper which is printed by Glenn Stevens. Robert Sherman rendered "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep"; Thelma Beasley sang too, accompanied by Lucille Baker at the piano. Then the funeral ended. They covered me with dirt—not any too reverently, either.

Gladys, getting here is an easy matter, but I had to have my lawyers, Mary Elizabeth Johnson and Harris Vinokur, argue Saint Peter into admitting me. Imagine the humiliation! I'll stand by you, though.

Not so much occurred until recently. Anne Evans, the New York Times star reporter, died of a broken heart in spite of the faithful administering of Doctor Annie Boone. Anne and I have done a great deal of talking lately. She told me that Joe Melvin and Gregory Holmes own the world's largest department stores, and they have hired, it seems, everything from clerks to stenographers and secretaries—all coming from Fayetteville. Minnie Lou Genes, Vera McLaurin, Elizabeth Sykes, Marjorie Morris, and Elsie Peoples are clerks. Stenographers for the firm are: Marguerite McLaurin, Kathryn Stone, Dorothy Sykes, Pauline Hall, and Frances Askea. Sarah Jackson and Kathleen McBennett are the chief secretaries. Bobby Baucum helps manage the home town store. Howard Griffin, Frank Burton, and Cecil Lee keep the accounts; L. G. Dew and William Driver take care of all important books and records. Wonder how many nights a week the owners (who told me they were out to be "ladies'-men"?) work—with the secretaries or stenographers? And, oh yes, Paul Autry, whom I always wanted to be a preacher, drew up the plans for the Fayetteville building.

Speaking of buildings, I guess you've heard of the awful Jernigan fire. They say Rupert's business was all but ruined. He runs a Parisian style shop, you know. Anne Burkhead gave up her "dramatic career" so that she and Betty Paige Shepherd could design the gowns. Evelyn Rose Simon tries to sell them to prospective customers, and the customers wear them—they hope. Fires really are awful things, often resulting in much tragedy. Are you sure your hospital is fire-proof? If not, call on inventor Francis Bullard for help. No use burning until you have to.

Of course you want to know what has happened to Eddie Joyner. Anne found out all about it from Mary Pittman, who is the telephone operator in the Joyner "Lovely Ladies' Luxuries" building. He sells all sorts of beauty hints to the young women of the world. Anne McInnis is practically boss of the firm; Ruth Fuqua and Frances Jackson aid her. Ira Blue Canady keeps an account of the firm's debts. Lacy Geddie and Ralph Hall test the creams for impurities.

Speaking of beauties, I hear that Roy Sappington is in the U. S. Coastguard service. Do lovely girls turn over in boats? Or what do the coast-guards do?

So Stacy Hair pulls teeth! And J. L. Johnson, Frank McFayden, Jim McLeod, Robert McMillan, Thomas Cheshire, and Laurence Nichols are getting wealthy selling tobacco. Will you need to borrow money for funeral expenses?

Guess what! Bettie London Wooten and Mary Coit Tillinghast have run away to Hollywood! Bettie London was the world's loveliest debutante, and Mary Coit was teaching expression. Teaching reminds me: Agnes Howard teaches English; Jackie Herring, health and physical education; Ethel Stevens, home economics in Lea Brown's school. When it comes to "home," has Frances Sloan married yet? I hear she's succeeded in making quite enough money in her athletic work to support them both. And has Cantey DeVane chosen between her loyalty to the Navy and marrying into the Army?

School reminds me of something else Anne said. She told me that engineers of all types are as prominent as Hitler was when we were young. She remembered about all of them: Fred Crowson, Jimmy Coiner, Billy Byrd, George Burriss, Von Autry, Bryan Beckwith, Jack Ratts, Alfred Riddle, Jack Rhodes, and James Roberts are a few.

And last but not least, in the way of peace and quiet, the president has just sent Jack Stubbs over to some far-off country to see what Jack can do to promote peace. It's really nice up here.

Perhaps I'd better stop now. I just wanted to write you a letter to cheer you up. I hope I'll see you soon.

Your loving friend,
Eleanor McRae.

Last Will and Testament

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
COUNTY OF CUMBERLAND
CITY OF FAYETTEVILLE

WE, the Class of '39 of Fayetteville High School, being of supposedly sound mind and having a high standard of character, do now hereby declare and publish certain properties and effects that we have obtained during the four years of our adventurous journey. We do will and bequeath the following:

SECTION I, ARTICLE I: To F. H. S., our fond memories of high school days.

SECTION I, ARTICLE II: To the faculty, the privileges of using us as shining models of perfection.

SECTION I, ARTICLE III: To Mr. Sisk, our hearty appreciation for his interest in us.

SECTION I, ARTICLE IV: To Mr. Harrill, our thanks for his staunch support and Council leading.

SECTION I, ARTICLE V: To the Parent-Teacher Association, our best wishes for a successful organization.

SECTION I, ARTICLE VI: To the Merchants, our gratitude for another year's interest in our annual.

SECTION II, ARTICLE I: To the Junior Class, we leave all of our Senior privileges and the enjoyment of editing the 1940 LAFAMAC.

SECTION II, ARTICLE II: To the Sophomores, we leave our school loyalty, hoping they will maintain this school spirit.

SECTION II, ARTICLE III: To the Freshmen, we leave our excellent patterns and our colors, blue and gold.

SECTION III, ARTICLE I: We, Gladys Sessoms, Helen Mann, Charles King, and Watson Lawhon, do will and bequeath our "clap, clap, clap" method to the oncoming cheer leaders.

I, Jack Lunday, do will and bequeath my ingrowing toenail to Frank Everett.

I, Mary Huske, do will and bequeath my blank mind and title "Porky" to Betty Varnadoe.

I, Eddie Joyner, do will and bequeath my memory to May Bob Downs.

I, Betty London Wooten, do will and bequeath my old maidish ways and spinster-like airs to Oneida Bowles.

I, Sam Wright, do will and bequeath my study room key to Clarence Olive.

I, Robert Sherman, do will and bequeath all past French knowledge to the highest bidder.

I, Evelyn Rose Simon, do will and bequeath my giggles to Mary Jane Brothers.

I, Jimmy Coiner, do will and bequeath my screechy voice to Elmer Yow.

I, Eleanor McRae, do will and bequeath my boy friends to Hazel Ponton.

I, Lea Brown, do will and bequeath my manly size to Jean Lyon.

I, Carter Twine, do will and bequeath my attractive feet and small toes to Stanley Betts.

I, Cantey DeVane, do will and bequeath my big brown eyes to William Hedgepeth.

I, Mary Elizabeth Johnson, do will and bequeath my studiousness to Anna Louise Fake.

In witness whereof we, the said Senior Class of Fayetteville High School, do hereunto set our hand and seal, this January twentieth, nineteen thirty-nine.

Signed,

Witnesses:

SONG OF A SOPHOMORE

Once we were all Freshmen,
The freshest little things!
Now we're all Sophomores—
Happy as Queens and Kings!

Next year we'll all be Juniors—
A thought that makes us sing!
The third year must hold lots in store
(For Juniors think they're everything.)

But Freshman, Junior, or Senior—
Name any one you dare,
There's more fun being a Sophomore,
For a Sophomore has no care!

Onward, Freshmen of '39,
Just a few more rungs on the ladder to climb,
The barriers may be many,
The rewards may be few,
But keep on climbing,
It's up to you.
Up the ladder 'til face to face
You'll see where we'll soon take the Seniors' place.
A few more fleeting years to go,
And at the end we'll have trophies to show.

The Ratification of the Constitution

On November 21, 1789, North Carolina adopted the Constitution of the United States here in Fayetteville. The Convention called for this purpose met in the Old State House where now stands our present Market House. During the fire of 1831, the Old State House, as well as other important buildings, was destroyed. Shortly afterwards our present Market House was built. This November 21 was a great day in our Cape Fear village and a great day for the state, as North Carolina was next to the last state in the Union to accept the Constitution. She had rejected it for the lack of a bill of rights guaranteeing the individual liberties of the citizens and so had remained a sovereign independent state for more than a year after our Nation was formed. The Assembly had been in session several weeks prior to the ratification day. Presiding over the Senate of the General Assembly was Richard Caswell who some years before had been the first governor to be elected by the people. Sorrow came to the body when this great statesman was stricken with paralysis on the fifth of November, dying five days later. Many noted men were members of this Assembly, among them Wiley Jones, Nathaniel and John Macon, Samuel Spencer. Picture the excitement of these days preceding the ratification when heated arguments filled the Hall of the Old State House and oratory abounded—flowing from the lips of North Carolina's most distinguished sons of that period. When the vote was finally taken and the Old North State decided to become one of the United States of America, the Old State House bell was rung enthusiastically by those favoring this step.

In recognition of this event one hundred years later, the people of Fayetteville had a great centennial celebration, attended by people from all over the state. A significant thing in connection with this celebration was the fact that the Marine Band, conducted by Sousa, played Dixie for the first time amidst a tremendous outburst of enthusiasm.

In November, 1939, the entire State will celebrate the Sesquicentennial of this memorable occasion here at Fayetteville.

Sports

HORSE-RACING was the favorite sport of this time. The races were usually held over a period of three days. The town was crowded with visitors, bets ran high, and excitement pervaded the entire community. Each day was usually ended with a ball, attended by the fashion and beauty of the surrounding country. At first, quarter racing was pursued with great spirit. It was a quarter mile race by two or more horses along parallel lines, streets sometimes being used for the purpose. Later course racing was carried on, and then jockey clubs formed—and soon more care was given to the training of the horses. The interest in horse racing very likely led to the development of the "ring tournament," a spectacle of horsemanship and pageantry. The rider had to ride through the rings and carry them on his lance to the judges' stand. The winner was the one who had removed the greatest number of rings, and he had the privilege of crowning the "Queen of Love and Beauty." Often the winner received a substantial prize as well, for a tournament was often held to raise money for some worthy purpose. The coronation ceremony which usually followed at night was a dramatic part of the pageantry, and preceded the Grand Ball.

Cockfighting was another sport in general favor. The main usually consisted of twenty-one cocks with a purse of from three to five hundred dollars a main. Easter Monday was a popular time for cock mains, but there were also spring and fall contests. On the day of a fight all roads leading to the town where the main was to be held were alive with carriages, horses, and pedestrians hastening to the cock pit, which might be at a store, tavern, or in an open space near the center of the town. Each fowl was armed with long steel pointed gaffs firmly attached to its spurs, and amid the lusty shouts of the crowds, the birds fought.

DRIBBLING ALONG WITH THE BOYS

With every prospect of developing into one of the strongest basketball teams to represent the school, the Bulldogs tackled a very difficult schedule which concluded with games against the strong Charlotte High team and Davidson freshmen. With 8 lettermen returning, and captained by George Burriss, the boys had a record of 10 wins and 2 losses at this writing. The team was coached by J. Wick Smith.

LEATHER GLOVE PUNCHES

Under the able leadership of Coach Tommy Bass, Fayetteville produced a powerful squad of leather-pushers. Led by Louis Vestal, two times State champion, the locals easily marched through their early season matches. Marvis Howell, Ted Rhodes, Jim McLeod, Marion Kinlaw, Homer Belche, Vance McBryde, and Charlie Jones were the Bulldogs' best performers.

Trading and Tradespeople

THE TRADE of nearly all Western and Northwest Carolina formerly came to Fayetteville, which was the great inland mart of trade of North Carolina. Flaxseed, tobacco, wheat, flour, and cotton were annually brought to this market. This trade was carried on by canvas-topped wagons drawn by horses as vehicles of transportation. These teams were often set off by circlets of little bells surmounting their collars which gave out a musical jingle as they plodded the heavy roads, tossing their heads and quickening their pace at the crack of the long snake-whip of the teamster. The teamsters preferred to camp in the outskirts of town on the last night of their journey. A principle and very large camp was on Haymount, a short distance west of the present water stand-pipe. Sometimes ten or twelve wagons would drive into this extensive field, one after another, as the shades of night deepened.

The merchants were conservative and cautious, and as honest as the day, with their word their bond. They had the full confidence of the folk with whom they traded.

The townspeople were fond of gathering at the village stores where everything from molasses to a yard of broadcloth might be purchased, served up with politics and town gossip. In fair weather the men took their problems outside and the loafers might sit all day on boxes in the sun whittling away at a pine stick and spinning yarns. However, the merchants, lawyers, and planters chose rather to stand in groups at a favorite corner, in front of the post office or on the courthouse steps and discuss the news of the day.

One of the first boats to ply the Cape Fear River bore the name "City of Fayetteville" and was launched not far from the Clarendon Bridge. There were many passengers as well as freight boats operated on the river, and a trip down to Wilmington could be enjoyable as well as profitable. The captain's crew knew everybody and took a personal interest in the passengers' welfare.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

Don't run around with trackmen, they're too fast.

Let biological men alone, they like to cut up too much.

A football man will do; he'll tackle anything.

Don't have anything to do with a baseball man, he hits and runs.

Don't ever talk to band players, they had rather blow their own horn.

A swimmer will do; he'll dive in and do his best.

WORTH'S BUSINESS COLLEGE

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.

He was taking her for a moonlight ride, and after they had ridden a few miles, Mary said:
"I want you to understand that I don't hold hands, neck, or pet. Is that clear?"
"Yes," said Rupert.
"Now where do you want to go from here?" asked Mary.
"Home!" murmured Rupert.

Dear Sir:

Read your advertisement in our paper stating: "Young man, some woman loves you dearly. Would you like to know who she is? One dollar to the "Loves Forum" will obtain for you the desired information."

Find enclosed that amount. Answer as soon as possible. Am bursting with curiosity.

AUTOGRAPHS

THE THREE LEGGED STOOL

Some of the older group perusing these pages will recall the old three-legged stool—a fixture in most offices in the past. It was useful as long as all three legs were intact and in good condition. Many have likened good printing—especially high grade advertising and year books to the old stool—dependent on three things: good photographs, good printing plates and good presswork. This company has brought the idea up to date! They have added the fourth important factor: specialized personal service for those who want less worry and more certainty. If you are one of the ever growing group that desires fine printing plus this added feature, correspondence or an interview is invited.
